The Next Big Thing

Must-haves for the kitchen

They're making stoves on wheels so you can cook eggs in the bedroom, and they're making refrigerators equipped with computers.

So we can only assume appliances are getting fancier and more complex for the upscale kitchen. But does anyone need a water facet on the stove? Is it so hard to shift a pot of water from the sink to a burner?

Apparently. The pot-filler, a faucet on the back wall of a stove, is the newest status addition to the well-supplied kitchen. It's so hot some people call it a "sizzle."

Restaurant-grade appliances such as industrial mixers and bread makers are fast becoming the must-have for homes.

The choices in pot-fillers are numerous, and prices start as low as $125 and go up to close to $1,000. (That's not counting installing a water line).

You're the star

A new gadget from Sony PlayStation 2 lets you star in your own video game. Connect the EyeToy camera to a PlayStation unit, plug the console into a television, and pop in the included game disc. As you juggle flying saucers in "UFO Juggler," your body movements appear as part of the game play on the TV screen.

The EyeToy costs $50. Check it out at www.us.playstation.com.

RoadStor

The RoadStor could become a frequent traveler's favorite toy. This portable gadget functions as a CD burner, a DVD player, an MP3 player and a digital photo viewer. It can download MP3s and burn CDs on its own or with the help of a PC or Macintosh. Want to watch a movie or look at photos? Just connect it to the TV.

RoadStor sells for $250. Go online to www.micro-solution.com.

Surf online stealthfully

Want to visit a Web site, but don't want your boss or nosy roommate to find out? The StealthSurfer can keep your online pursuits private. Simply plug the device into a USB port on a PC and all your Internet files and Web based e-mail will be stored on the unit and not on your hard drive.

And because the device can only be accessed with a password, there's no need to lock it in your desk
